John Caster gave the Industry Relations and Alliances report. John reported that NFRBMEA is pursuing closer relations with other organizations to better meet the needs of our member instructors and our students. John and committee member Steve Metzger challenged the members to secure a list of vendors or sponsors. Specific projects such as the National Institute, Nuts and Bolts, conference coffee breaks, and other projects or activities might be more easily promoted. Classification of sponsorship might be promoted such as Gold, Silver and Bronze.

Ron VanNurden reported that the Resources committee recommended that the establishment of an electronic library be pursued, with Charles Duell as the librarian. Morgan Community College would act as the host for the library. The library would include software, databases, curriculum, links, and other information that could be available for use and exchange by the members. Information to be placed in the library would be reviewed by a committee in an attempt to maintain quality. Ron requested that members respond to the needs survey that will be sent.

Tom Weygandt reported that our organization will not be involved in Instructor Certification but will attempt to establish Instructor Standards.

A request was made for volunteers that may be interested in serving as additional members on a committee for the coming year.

Jim Kelm reported on cooperative efforts with the National Association of Farm Business Analysis Specialists, NAFBAS, to combine some activities that would include conference hosting. The combined groups would encompass about 500 members that serve about 40,000 farms. The 2004 NAFBAS national conference will be held in Wichita, Kansas and the 2005 conference will be in Washington

D.C. A joint conference might be a goal for the 2006 conference, when NAFBAS will be meeting in Omaha, Nebraska.
